

About Us

Established in Dallas in the late 1980s, Cooper Homes is headed up by Simmie Cooper, a native of Johannesburg, South Africa. With more than 20 years of home construction experience, Simmie Cooper, a California licensed contractor, is enjoying the success he's experiencing with his unique design applications in the Dallas market.

Simmie moved to the United States in 1976, after graduating from high school in Johannesburg, and entered the University of Southern California, majoring in accounting. He graduated in 1981 with a B.A. in Business Administration, and was also qualified as a CPA. However, after a year of working in accounting, he decided to go to work for a builder. With his family in Johannesburg heavily involved in real estate and residential building, Simmie had grown up around the construction industry, and soon decided to pursue a career in home construction. California contractors must meet stringent requirements and be bonded, as well as licensed by the state. Simmie worked as a superintendent for a California builder and completed the three years of experience required, and passed the state board exam to become a licensed contractor.

For Simmie Cooper, part of building a strong company is developing a reputation of honesty and integrity. Taking good care of the customer and looking after their needs well after the sale is one way that Cooper Homes has established this outstanding reputation in the community.